>"Hey Barry, I never asked. What about your double?" Kara asked while they were working on what looked like a pair of ear plugs."

"I don't know." Barry responded. "I tried using a facial recognition software. Which I added into your computer by the way, incase you need it. All that turned up was some big shot lawyer that lives in Ohio."

"Oh." Kara said.

"Don't worry." Barry said. "We'll figure this out. Let's first take down your crazy metahumans."

A professional young man walked out of the elevator of the floor of Cat Grant's office. He wore a grey suit, his hair gelled back and a confident aura as he entered the office. Winn who was sitting at his desk before working while Kara was fetching layouts for Ms. Grant immediately saw the intruder.

"Barry?" Winn asked. "What are you doing here?"

"I'm sorry, I believe you have me mistaken for a different person." The man said. "I am here for an interview with a Ms. Cat Grant."

"Y...yeah." Winn stammered still a little confused. "Her office is right over there."

"Thank you." He said and continued to walk leaving behind a confused Winn.

Kara found her friend with a blank expression in his face. "Hey Winn. What's up, you look like you've seen a ghost."

"I think I did." Winn muttered. "Are you sure that Barry went home?"

"I'm pretty sure." Kara said. "Unless the little vortex in the middle of nowhere was just an illusion of the light. And I have pretty good eyesight so I don't think that's the case. Why?"

"I think I just saw Barry enter Cat's office in a suit and slightly off character."

"That's weird." Kara said. "Maybe it's just someone who looks like him."

"No I'm pretty sure it's him."

"Good Morning, Ms. Grant."

"I am pretty sure you are in the wrong building young man. You look like a fresh graduate." Cat pointed out. "I specifically asked for an experienced lawyer."

"That would be me." He said holding out his hand. "Sebastian Smythe."

"Smythe?" she asked skeptically. "Any relation to Stanly Smythe?"

"He is my father." Sebastian said.

"Ah." Ms. Grant replaced the glasses. "You can go tell your father that I require someone with much more experience. Not some spoiled trust fund baby."

"Excuse me."

"Please, this is the oldest trick in the book, Mr. Smythe." Ms. Grant said taking off her glasses and rolling them in her fingers. "It is nepotism in its most simplest form. Taking a job in a firm that your father owns to create a bigger name for yourself without having to work. This is the biggest problem of all millennial today."

"I assure you, Ms. Grant. There is no other better. Top of my class and the best and youngest lawyer in the firm. I am determined and most importantly, I know what I am doing. I have been around this environment since I was a mere child. No one can win a case like I could."

Ms. Grant studied the young man before her. He looked a lot like the other boy that Kera had brought in the week before claiming to be her cousin. She remembered the Flash, who was smart as a whip with the same face. This boy had the same wit and charm without the inhumanely nice personality.

"Alright. I have just the case to prove it." Ms. Grant said. "Two of my former employees turned crazy tried to kill me. Since my General Council quit, I need a new lawyer to represent me in court this week."

"Of course, Miss Grant." Sebastian said. His smile was this cheeky smile that Cat remembered was similar to the Flash.

"Welcome to CatCo." Cat Grant said holding out her hand to the law school prodigy.

"I thought Barry went home." James said standing beside the two best friends as they looking shell shocked through the glass of Cat Grant's office.

"He did." Kara said flabbergasted. "I saw him go through the portal."

"Maybe this is the Barry of this earth." Winn suggested. " that is possible."

"Yeah." James said. "Just because we vibrate at different frequencies doesn't mean that there are different people in the dimensions." James glanced into Cat's office again. "This is still creepy though."

"I know."

"Can't you listen in to at least know if it's really Barry." Winn asked. "I mean Barry Allen in his earth would still be Barry Allen here."

"I can."

But before she could listen in. Cat and the Barry look-alike had left the office. The three of them stood up from their places perched on the tables.

"Kera." Cat ordered. "Please direct Mr. Smythe to the GC office. And send direct all the case files for the Livewire case to him. And book me that appointment with my therapist my mother's coming to town next Friday."

"Yes, Miss Grant." Kara said absentmindedly. Try as she could, she couldn't stop staring at the Barry Allen lookalike in front of her.

Cat Grant gave a small chuckle and went back into her office. Sebastian scrunched his eyebrows.

"Why are you looking at me like that?"

James intercepted. Seeing that Kara was still in a bit of shock.

"Sorry, you just look like someone we know." James said. "James Olsen."

"Sebastian Smythe."

"Smythe?" Kara echoed.

"Yeah. What about it?" Sebastian asked defensively.

"Nothing." She said quickly. "I just recognize the name."

"Maybe from my father." Sebastian said. "Stanly Smythe is a known prosecutor."

"Yeah." Winn said. "Hi. I'm Winn Schott, Jr."

"Pleasure." Sebastian said. "Please direct me to the General Council's Office so I can start."

"I'm sorry." Kara said snapping out of it. "Right this way."

Kara looked at Sebastian in interest. He looked so much like Barry it was unnerving. Down to the mole at the side of his face.

"I know I am an amazing piece of work, but could you please stop staring at me like that. I may be used to being admired but this is unnerving." Sebastian said with a smirk that caused Kara to chuckle a bit.

"Sorry." Kara said opening the door of an office. "So here's the GC's Office."

"Thanks."

"So the last GC still has everything in the drawers organized in case you need them." Kara said. "And if you need anything. You can ask me."

"Alright. Thank you, Kara is it?"

"Kara. Actually." Kara said holding out her hand to Sebastian. "Kara Danvers."

"Sebastian Smythe." He said shaking her hand. "By the way. The glasses. And the layers. It's a waste for a sexy girl to hide in hideous sweaters and elephant clothing to say frankly."

"Iâ€¦uhâ€¦" she stammered. "Iâ€¦am seeing someone."

Sebastian caught himself and smiled sheepishly

"I'm sorry." He said offhandedly. "One of my good friends is in fashion design. Trust me if he sees you right now he'd demand a trip to the mall."

Sebastian put down his bag on the chair by the table. "And don't worry Kara Danvers. You're not my type. James Olsen, however, Is a bit more my speed. Better do your move fast girl before that boy is snatched right from under your nose."

Kara looked at him incredulously. But he just gave her a devious wink with a smirky grin.
